10,00	A safer and sustainable future for Europe: the DNSH principle in action, for a truly ecological transition of the European economy Public administrations in the EU are facing a significant challenge: securing economic development without producing any significant harm to the environment. The compliance with the 'do no significant harm' principle (DNSH) shall be ensured under cohesion policy, in coherence with the approach under the Recovery and Resilience Facility (RRF). Furthermore, in the Green Deal framework, PAs need to foster their policies towards climate change action (mitigation and adaptation): decarbonising to tackle global warning, ensuring prosperity and wellbeing, changing behaviours across society. GPP and other instruments can be useful tools for PAs to face these challenges and reach climate change and sustainable development goals. - Massimo Canali – Friuli Venezia Giulia Central Director for Environmental Protection, energy and sustainable development Welcome address - Vincenzo Capocasale, Interreg Europe Secretariat Interreg Europe: the state of play of interregional cooperation - Enrico Degiorgis – European Commission, DG Environment The EU green public procurement policy - Alexandra Lamotte –Ministry for ecological transition (France) Regulatory framework and support for sustainable public procurement in France. - Cristina Peretti–Ministry of the Ecological Transition (Italy), GPP Working Group Italian Green Public Procurement legal and technical framework: a driver for circular economy - Alberta Congeduti, Ecosistemi Foundation

	Do not significant harm: how to move from the principle to the practice and get funded - Mara Inzaina, ICLEI The Procura+ European Sustainable Procurement Network: Connect - Exchange - Act Chair: Sabina Nicoletta, Fondazione Ecosistemi
